

Return to a More Beautiful, Younger-Looking You with Upper Eyelid Surgery

Do friends or family ask you if you're tired even though you've had a great night's sleep? Do people say you look sad when you feel quite content, thank you very much! Do you look in the mirror and wonder why you don't look like you did years ago? All of these things may be due to heavy excess skin and fat that forms around our eyelids as we get older. In particular, the eyes show aging changes more prominently than other parts of our bodies and even subtle changes are noticeable.

When people speak and look at us, they typically look at our faces and focus on our eyes. It is for this reason, that any change around the eye area is noticed almost immediately. Eyelid skin is incredibly thin and delicate which makes aging changes hard to conceal. Eyelid creams and lotions can be temporarily helpful when only mild aging has occurred.

Eyelid surgery is an immediate, long term solution with tremendous impact.

Surgical treatment of the upper eyelids, called blepharoplasty, removes excess skin and fatty tissue. The incisions are placed in the upper eyelid crease and are virtually invisible after the eyelids are healed. Downtime is brief and the post-operative period is spent applying ice compresses to the eyelids.

You can see a patient of mine who underwent upper eyelid blepharoplasty surgery to remove skin and fat from the upper eyelids. I think you'll agree that the impact of her surgery is dramatic. In just one hour of outpatient surgery her entire appearance is improved for years to come. Look at how alert, awake, and "bright-eyed" she appears. She is still the same lovely person but now her appearance is refreshed and revitalized. The shape and contour of her eyes remain undisturbed and
